Birthrights strategy 2022-24

Championing human rights, inclusion and racial equity in maternity care

Protecting human rights in childbirth

Our vision and mission

As the World Health Organisation has recognised, too many women and birthing people have their basic rights denied during pregnancy and childbirth, due to gender, race, disability, sexuality or disadvantage. Birthrights exists to challenge these rights abuses and protect everyone's human rights in UK maternity care.

- Our vision is to ensure everyone receives the respect and dignity they deserve in pregnancy and childbirth.
- Our mission is to equip women and pregnant people with the knowledge and power to advocate for rights-respecting care, and to use our influence to improve services and practice throughout the maternity system.

Our values

Dignity

You matter. Your experience of pregnancy and childbirth matters.

Expertise

Our authority comes from unrivalled understanding of the legal issues in maternity care and insight into your emotional needs at one of the most critical times of your life.

Autonomy

We believe the maternity system doesn't work without you, the women or birthing person, at its heart.

Practicality

We understand how the system works. We want to evolve attitudes and services using innovative and tangible tools and ideas.

Humanity

Safe, quality, lawful care recognises that you deserve to be treated as an individuals. We listen to you and engage with compassion.

Inclusion

Human rights are for everyone. We want to be a safe space and champion for anyone who needs us, particularly those who face the most discrimination and disadvantage in maternity care.

What we do

We are the only UK charity dedicated to using the human rights legal framework to improve maternity care, through:

- empowering women and birthing people to know and act on their rights through our information resources and email advice service
- training doctors, midwives and other birth workers to improve their practice and influence wider NHS culture
- campaigning for systemic change on a national and local level

Led by people with lived experience of childbirth across our Board of Trustees and senior team, we put the voices of women and birthing people at the heart of our work. We shine a spotlight on the experiences of those most at risk of having their rights denied in maternity care due to structural discrimination.

Our theory of change

Revised with NCVO March 2021

a. Website and social media

b. Factsheets (online)

c. Advice service (email)

d. External platforms

e. Media work

f. Advice via partners and joint comms campaigns

g. Training workshops

h. Speaking at healthcare events

i. Research (in-house, external projects)

j. Direct policy influencing (engagement, consultations)

k. Campaigning (Covid, race inquiry) Women and birthing people can find accessible information that meets their needs

Women and birthing people have practical support to advocate for their rights with their local NHS Trust

Women and birthing people better understand their rights in pregnancy and childbirth

Women and birthing people feel better equipped to advocate for their rights

Women and birthing people's autonomy and choices are respected in pregnancy and birth

Women and birthing people experience safer and more respectful care

Healthcare professionals improve their knowledge of human rights in maternity care

Health professionals have more confidence to apply human rights in their practice

Healthcare professionals change their practice to deliver rights-respecting maternity care

When women and birthing people advocate for their rights, they are taken seriously

Decision-makers and healthcare professionals take action to address inequalities in care

Maternity policy at a national and local level better reflects the human rights framework

Decision-makers better understand why human rights are vital to maternity care

Decision-makers increasingly see Birthrights as a credible and reliable source of legal info and rights-based policy advice

Decision-makers are more committed to ensuring maternity policy better reflects the human rights framework

Decision-makers' actions are more closely aligned with Birthrights approach and recommendations Everyone receives the respect and dignity they deserve in pregnancy and childbirth in the UK

I. Legal action

Strategic goals and objectives 2022-24

Protecting human rights in childbirth

Strategic goals

- 1. Consolidate and grow the reach, inclusivity and impact of our information, advice and training, working in partnership to target new audiences
- 2. Influence maternity care systems, policy and practice to safeguard basic rights and champion inclusion, with a focus on racial equity
- 3. Be a sustainable, inclusive and anti-racist charity, where staff are supported to thrive and lived experience shapes all we do

1. Consolidate and grow the reach, inclusivity and impact of our information, advice and training, working in partnership to target new audiences

- Triple the reach of the advice service through increased and targeted marketing, while maintaining a high-quality, tailored and timely response to individuals directly support 3,000 people a year by the end of 2023
- Partner with specialist charities to upskill their staff on basic birth rights, reach their networks with our core information, and co-create new resources
- Develop a Content Strategy, creating new accessible, inclusive resources in a range of formats across factsheets, website and media reach 500,000 people
- Grow our training and speaker engagement offer through a sustainable infrastructure, maintaining and building on our excellent standards and reputation – deliver 50 training events and 30 speaking engagements in Y1

2. Influence maternity care systems, policy and practice to safeguard basic rights and champion inclusion, with a focus on racial equity

- Deliver phase two of the race inquiry: dissemination and influencing in partnership to drive anti-racist action across the maternity system
- Uphold autonomy, choice and consent in the post-COVID, post-Ockenden landscape, including mode and place of birth, out of guidelines care, declining interventions, midwifery-led care, rights-based decision-making by Trusts
- Celebrate 10 years of Birthrights and 25 years of the Human Rights Act through an integrated communications and policy campaign in 2023, new Human Rights in Childbirth Awards, and Big Give fundraising appeal
- Engage with and amplify the sector movement to transform maternity care investment, staffing and culture, bringing rights lens but letting others lead

3. Be a sustainable, inclusive and anti-racist charity, where staff are supported to thrive and lived experience shapes all we do

- Develop and implement more robust, efficient systems and processes to strengthen: data management and security; IT tech and software; employment and governance policies; insights and evaluation
- Consolidate income of at least £450k per year from restricted and nonrestricted grants, training and fundraising
- Scope and implement a meaningful, proportionate participation model to embed lived experience throughout our work
- Design, resource and implement an internal race equity action plan to tackle systemic racism at all levels of our organisation